Global Governance

Curation: Blavatnik School of Government, University of Oxford

Global governance is a means to manage issues that cut across national borders - whether it is a pandemic, a financial crisis, climate change, or a geo-economic dispute. Though traditionally centred on diplomacy and international organizations, a wide variety of public and private actors now engage in cross-border governance. The work itself has expanded well beyond treaty-making to include formal and informal monitoring, standard-setting, enforcement, and financing. Effective governance is essential to secure peaceful, healthy, and prosperous societies, particularly now amid COVID-19, worsening ecological crises, mounting geopolitical tension, and growing nationalist backlash against globalization.

This briefing is based on the views of a wide range of experts from the World Economic Forum's Expert Network and is curated in partnership with Thomas Hale, Associate Professor in Public Policy (Global Public Policy), Blavatnik School of Government, University of Oxford.

"COVID-19: The Great Reset" is a guide for anyone who wants to understand how COVID-19 disrupted our social and economic systems, and what changes will be needed to create a more inclusive, resilient and sustainable world going forward. Klaus Schwab, founder and executive Chairman of the World Economic Forum, and Thierry Malleret, founder of the Monthly Barometer, explore what the root causes of these crisis were, and why they lead to a need for a Great Reset. Theirs is a worrying, yet hopeful analysis. COVID-19 has created a great disruptive reset of our global social, economic, and political systems. But the power of human

ID2020 and partners launch program to provide digital ID with vaccines

🕒 Sep 20, 2019 | Chris Burt

Sept. 2019

The ID2020 Alliance has launched a new digital identity program at its annual summit in New York, in collaboration with the Government of Bangladesh, vaccine alliance Gavi, and new partners in government, academia, and humanitarian relief.

The program to leverage immunization as an opportunity to establish digital identity was unveiled by ID2020 in partnership with the Bangladesh Government's Access to Information (a2i) Program, the Directorate General of Health Services, and Gavi, according to the announcement.

Digital identity is a computerized record of who a person is, stored in a registry. It is used, in this case, to keep track of who has received vaccination.

Your Driver's License Will Become a Vaccine Passport

Analysis by Dr. Joseph Mercola Fact Checked November 17, 2021

Little by little, it's becoming easier and more convenient to "present your papers" upon request. You're accustomed to keeping your driver's license with you, but states are increasingly rolling out digitized versions that "go way beyond what a driver's license is about."<sup>1</sup> Arizona, for instance, released a mobile driver's license (mDL) app in March 2021, and Eric Jorgensen, director of the motor vehicle division of Arizona's Department of Transportation, told Government Technology:<sup>2</sup>

"I actually hate the term 'mDL' because it doesn't recognize the power of what we're doing here ... The whole concept is that we're providing a way to remotely authenticate a person, to provide a trusted digital identity that doesn't exist today."

WEF Known Traveller Digital ID

Known Traveller Digital Identity or KTDI is a World Economic Forum initiative that brings together a global consortium of individuals, governments, authorities and the travel industry to enhance security in world travel. The pilot, scheduled to go live in early 2020, leverages cryptography, blockchain technology and biometrics and aims to allow cross-border travel without presenting physical documents, accelerating the flow of passengers through airports, improving passenger experience, and enabling authorities to better focus limited resources on security improvements.

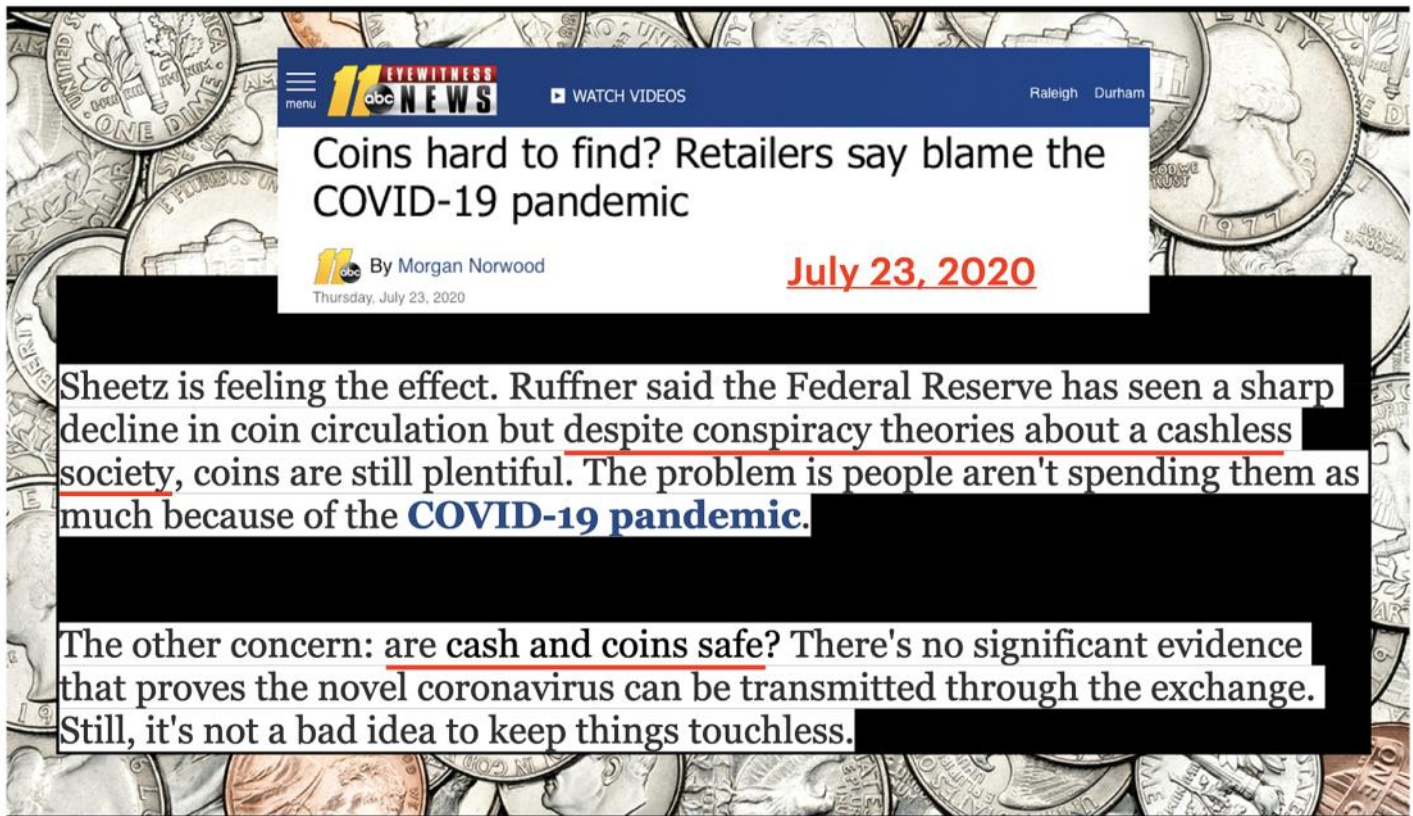

The Known Traveller Digital Identity, or KTDI, is a public/private collaboration that enhances security efforts, while enabling a connected journey for today's international traveller. See more.

U.S. Moves Closer To Digital Dollar

On June 30th, 2020, the Senate Banking Committee held a hearing on the future of the digital dollar. The pressures to create a digital USD are mounting as China recently began testing its own digital currency - the DCEP, which will be included in popular applications like WeChat and AliPay. Of particular concern is widespread adoption of a digital yuan in emerging markets and in international trade.

A Complete Overhaul of the U.S. Financial System? No Longer a "Conspiracy Theory"

Analysis by Tessa Lena November 20, 2021

Catherine Austin Fitts (FRM Assistant Secretary of Housing and Urban Development for Housing) pointed out that the aggressively promoted vaccine passports are connected to the attempted financial restructuring:

"If they get the passports, then I would argue, as a practical matter, we lose our ability to stop the Central Bank Digital Currencies. So, whatever we do, we need to stop the passports. The passports give them the kind of control they need of the digital and financial transactions that then leads into the CBDCs."

2018 IBM paper titled, "Programmable Money: Will Central Banks Take the Lead?"

The IBM paper states: "The future of programmable money is dawning. While blockchain adoption is still in a formative stage, it offers tremendous potential to revolutionize the global financial system. No place on earth will be out of reach."

For more context, here is the head of the Bank for International Settlements and his notorious speech about programmable currency in which he complains that with cash, they don't know who is using the money and how — while with CBDC, central banks will have "absolute control over the rules and regulations that will determine the use of that expression of central bank liability and also ... have the technology to enforce that."

Considering Kurzweil's words is a good place to begin this discussion. It's no secret that Google has transhumanistic aspirations. In 2011, Steven Levy made this bold statement about the company in the book, In the Plex: "From the very start, its founders saw Google as a vehicle to realize the dream of artificial intelligence in augmenting humanity." Naturally, it makes sense Google would bring on Kurzweil to be its Director of Engineering in 2012. For years, Kurzweil has been pushing the cultural conversation toward the idea of human transcendence with thought-provoking books: The Age of Spiritual Machines and The Singularity is Near: When Humans Transcend Biology.

Forbes

Although Kurzweil has gained much notoriety for proposing provocative ideas in the latter book, such as, “The Singularity will represent the culmination of the merger of our biological thinking and existence with our technology, resulting in a world that is still human but that transcends our biological roots,” the term “singularity” originated in a 1993 essay, The Coming Technological Singularity, by science fiction author and professor Vernor Vinge.

Crypto System Leveraging Body Activity Data

Microsoft Technology Licensing, the licensing arm of Microsoft Corp., has been granted an international patent for a "cryptocurrency system using body activity data." The patent was published by the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) on March 26. The application was filed on June 20 last year. "Human body activity associated with a task provided to a user may be used in a mining process of a cryptocurrency system," the patent reads, adding as an example:

What the COVID-19 pandemic teaches us about cybersecurity – and how to prepare for the inevitable global cyberattack

“If cyber-COVID mirrored the pathology of the novel coronavirus, 30% of infected systems would be asymptomatic and spread the virus, while half would continue functioning with performance severely degraded – the digital equivalent of being in bed for a week.

Meanwhile 15% would be “wiped” with total data loss, requiring a complete system reinstall. Finally, 5% would be “bricked” – rendering the device itself inoperable.

The end result: millions of devices would be taken offline in a matter of days.”

What the COVID-19 pandemic teaches us about cybersecurity – and how to prepare for the inevitable global cyberattack

The only way to stop the exponential propagation of cyber-COVID would be to fully disconnect all vulnerable devices from one another and the internet to avoid infection. The whole world could experience cyber lockdown until a digital vaccine was developed. All business communication and data transfers would be blocked. Social contact would be reduced to people contactable by in-person visits, copper landline, snail-mail or short-wave radio.

“But perhaps the most important lesson: Covid-19 was a known and anticipated risk. So, too, is the digital equivalent.”

Thousands of protesters took to the streets in Toulouse against France's mandatory health pass on July 12th 2021. More than 234,000 people demonstrated across France against the pass which will be mandatory for entry to a wide array of public venues such as cafes, theaters, concerts hall, cinemas, shopping malls, public transportation, public swimming pools, and even hospitals unless there's a critical situation.

... If uptake of the passport app is low, or if enough people turn around and walk out the door every time their local coffee shop asks to see their QR code, then after a month or two the app's supporters will be forced to backtrack.

But there is a limited window of time when this kind of protest can make a difference.

If a gold-standard vaccine passport app is indeed imminent, then people should start thinking a step ahead.

If the eventual result of a social credit system sounds dystopian to you, then now is the time to resist.

If we've learned anything from Covid, it's that, restrictions tend to stick around once they're imposed and the promised "back to normal" is always just around the corner.
